St. 10 per case; by gallons, $3.75 per case; dy gallons, $3.75 per pound. $3.75 per pound movement of spot cotton is getting lighter each day; even New Orleans, where a large premium is maintained has ceased to attract much cotton, and it is now doubtful it those wishing to see the buils dump their holdings can load them up with much more cotton, but the old crop situation seems to be lost sight of with the fine prospects for the coming crop. Barring the many reports of boil weevil in scattered sections of Texas prospects at this writing are most excellent for a big crop, but the mouth of May or even June is no criterion of what we may expect to the fall. Cotton lacks snap and a good support necessary for a built market. In New Orleans a large long interest exists among prominent outlis, against which is the spot corten. They are in a position to carry through their deal and this is about the only hope we can see for much higher prices unless crop conditions deteriorate materially. Liverpool is due to be 244 lower temorrow.
